Recommended Adoption of Textbooks for Advanced Placement English Language & Composition and Advanced Placement English Literature & Composition

December 12, 2023

Division of Instruction

Action Proposed:

Approve the adoption of:

- Ideas in Argument Building Skills and Understanding by Bedford, Freeman & Worth High School Publishers for use in Advanced Placement English Language & Composition; and
- Ideas in Literature Building Skills and Understanding by Bedford, Freeman & Worth Publishers for use in Advanced Placement English Literature & Composition.

Authorize the Chief Procurement Officer to negotiate textbook-purchase agreements. The Procurement Services Division and Library & Textbook Support will present the proposed final agreements, including terms and conditions with updated purchase volume estimates, to the Board of Education (Board) for approval, likely in Spring 2024.

Background:

Unlike the state adoption process for Grades K-8, California Education Code §60400 requires a Board-approved process for adoption that includes a legal compliance review. Library & Textbook Support thoroughly sought submissions from various publishers for the Advanced Placement English Language & Composition and Advanced Placement English Literature & Composition courses.

Library & Textbook Support coordinated the formation of the evaluation committees by requesting UTLA and LAUSD Regions to identify 16 committee members (eight UTLA selected and eight LAUSD - two selected from each region), whose primary objective was to evaluate the textbooks submitted by publishers in both print and electronic formats. The list of potential committee members from UTLA and the Regions, were vetted by Library & Textbook Support to confirm content area expertise. The committees consisted of the following, five teachers on the AP English Literature & Composition Adoption Committee & five teachers on the AP English Language & Composition Adoption Committee. These committees aimed to discern and recommend textbooks that best align with the specific learning requirements of LAUSD students. To accomplish this, the committees employed a rigorous evaluation instrument rooted in the guidelines outlined by the California Department of Education ELA/ELD Framework and the comprehensive criteria established by the College Board Course Framework & Course Description.

Our current Advanced Placement English Language & Composition and Advanced Placement English Literature & Composition textbooks were adopted in the Fall of 2017, with copyright dates of 2013 and 2014. Since then, the College Board has revised and updated the Advanced Placement courses and exams.

In October 2023, the Textbook Adoption committees convened after a comprehensive review and evaluation of the materials throughout the summer, resulting in the recommendation of adopting Ideas in Argument Building Skills and Understanding by Bedford, Freeman & Worth High School Publishers for use in Advanced Placement English Language & Composition and Ideas in Literature Building Skills and Understanding by Bedford, Freeman & Worth Publishers for use in Advanced Placement English Literature & Composition. The committee members, using the California Department of Education's guidance, engaged in thorough deliberations regarding these materials. The criteria encompassed an evaluation of their alignment with the College Board course framework & course description, program organization, assessment, universal access, and instructional planning, including teacher support.

Expected Outcomes:

Board adoption of the instructional materials recommended for use in the District will provide our students with up-to-date information and reflect the course revision. This ensures that students learn the most relevant and accurate content for their exams. Students will be better prepared to excel on the Advanced Placement exams. The recommended textbooks include resources and support for teachers, which can support effective instruction.

Board Options and Consequences:

If the Board does not adopt the recommended instructional materials, students will continue to use the currently adopted instructional materials.

Policy Implications:

The policy of targeting state funding to implement adoptions is consistent with the content and cycles of the curriculum framework adopted by the State Board of Education.

Budget Impact:

Textbook funds have been identified from the General Funds Unrestricted Account to cover the adoption of these recommended materials. Once negotiations are complete, the textbook-purchase agreements, including all terms and conditions, will be presented to the Board for approval.

Student Impact:

Updated Advanced Placement textbooks are designed to align with the most current Advanced Placement curriculum and exam format, ensuring our students are prepared for the Advanced Placement exams which takes place every Spring. The availability of these Advanced Placement textbooks underscores our commitment to equitable access to superior educational resources, regardless of students' individual circumstances or available resources.

Equity Impact:

Component	Score	Score Rationale
Recognition	3	Although the Advanced Placement textbooks are published for a national level, not California specific, the publishers have improved at providing authentic voices in addressing historical inequities. Supplementing textbooks with culturally relevant and responsive materials developed by the District and partners can also increase the recognition of specific historical inequities that need to be reversed.

Component	Score	Score Rationale
Resource Prioritization	1	The proposed textbooks will be issued to every AP English Language & English Literature student regardless of need. In order to meet Williams Sufficiency requirements, all students regardless of need are entitled to a textbook appropriate for their course. These textbooks comply with CA Education Code requirements.
Results	3	Providing all students with access to quality Advanced Placement textbooks ensures that they have access to the same high-level educational resources, regardless of their school's location or funding. The recommended books have the content and the resources to close achievement gaps when implemented in concert with culturally responsive pedagogy.
